Hey everybody,

I've been posting a little already and with the help of a few of you sent my first model to be printed yesterday! Thanks guys!

I did some 3d modeling back in the 90s with RayDream. I now do a bit of wood carving. I'm excited to marry my wood carving skills with my computer skills and avoid all the time to carve out my idea.

mmmm dreams of a wood pulp printed model There is something about the look and feel of wood that really works for me. I used to do some carving myself, although I never had any skill at it. Welcome to the community.

I've heard MCOR Matrix produces objects with the feel of wood, which is pretty neat if you ask me.

bcournoyer: Minne-snow-ta? How's that this time of year?
