About me: Paul King, aka stop4stuff
Expertise: 3D modelling for 3D printing. I can create just about anything, although organic modelling is not a strong point.
Experience: Modelling for 3D printing since June 2010. 3D modelling with Imagine for about 20 years.
Portfolio: My Shapeways Shop
Rate: Varies depening upon the complexity of the job.
Contact: Via Shapeways PM, or email paul@stop4stuff.com

A few of examples of my work.

Twin rail mobius pendant

OO scale K8 telephone box

A selection of model train parts recently modelled for 'O' Scale (1:43.5) for printing in Shapeways Frosted Ultra Detail.
To put the size into perspective, the large spring unit at the bottom of the image is just 35mm long by 11mm high - small and accurate is my kinda thing

Very happy with the results!

Paul made me a 3d cross ring for my girlfriend and she was impressed! It looked just like the one I accidentally broke.
He also made me a copy of an antique porcelain canopy.

Definitively recommended!

Maciek

Hello. My name is Jeremy Williams, and I'm looking for a 3d modeler for a video game my team is working on. The only option for payment is an even share of sales. Contact me at avm0121@hotmail.com if you're interested.

Hi Jeremy,

Thanks for the interest, however I specialise in creating 3D models for 3D printing.

I hope you find someone to fill your vacancy.

Cheers,
Paul

Paul helped me with creating a piece of office supplies and did excellent work. He thought along and came with solutions for problems. The model was needed on a short notice and he delivered the model on time and replied quick to my e-mails. Recommended!

Paul helped me find my problem with an order I uploaded and got me going again. This guy definitely knows his modeling and he knows Shapeways.

I need a model for a thread adapter, to have a machinist make me a model will cost an arm and a leg, but i think making a CAD 3d model to be printed should be an hour or less job, but I am better with hardware than software. If your interested, let me know, I'd like it done within the week, so i can play with it next weekend. the female threads would be 1/2"x28threads, the male end would be 13/16â€³-16 with a ~2" 'washer' between the two... heres a link to a picture, but i'd like a large washer built in...

I've a few life issues to deal with the last couple of months, but am back on track and now available for your 3D modelling (for 3D printing) jobs no matter how small or large.

Cheers,
Paul

I am extremely happy with Paul. He helped me with a model I had been working on.

I had been struggling to get my model to get past the automated upload process...until finally Paul came by and helped me!

He said it wasn't a problem helping me and gave me a tutorial on how to fix it if I had any future problems.

I would highly recommend this guy!

Earlier this year, I had a breakdown.

I apploogise to those I let down and hope the refund + compensation was adequate.

Now my medication has me back on the straight, I am now looking to help out anyone that needs help.

All the best,
Paul

My monthly bump

Anyone out there need anything created for Shapeways 3D printing?
I'm pretty much available for any kind of 3D model work at short notice, including but not limited to;

Creating models from scratch, from your drawings, images or even just a written description.
Creating models from scratch, from your drawings, images or even just a written description.
Fixing your models for 3D printing.
Helping you understand aspects of 3D modelling to empower you to make your own creations.
Or even just taking you through the steps towards fixing your models for Shapeways 3D printing

I will quote for a model guaranteed to be printable via Shapeways in the material of your choice.
I also offer full confidentiality and you also retain full rights to the model that you commission.

All the best,
Paul King (aka stop4stuff)
