If you attended Shapeways Live Yesterday, you heard about a Render update on the site. This fixed a lot of stuff in the background that you'll not notice, but it did fix one thing that you should appreciate. Previously, color renders were limited in the number of colors displayed. This caused the render to not appear properly. Not good if your relying on that to see how your model will look when printed. Note that this fix is for the static image and not for the 3D render (in the works). So before you would have seen something like this

To this! Look at that blue water and grey poptart cat!
