Hello,

a few days ago I was sent an e-mail saying my item was being sent to the printers.

I was expecting that after that they would be shipped. However it still says ship date pending.

How long after an item says it is being printed till when it ships?

It says it was being printed Monday, and it is now Friday.

Thanks for the help.

I have come to read that "en route to the printers" message as "the file has been checked by a human and a cnc job file for the printer has been created, so no worries that it might still be rejected". After that, I guess it is waiting in line with all the other preprocessed jobs.

So far, my orders have been shipped either on the estimated date, or 1-2 days in advance.

(There must be some slack in the estimation to account for hardware problems, occasional misprints, workers calling in sick or whatever little mishaps you would expect in what still must be a small business by headcount)

Hi Lord Dragon Master,

I just checked your order and spotted that one of your models has been printed and is currently in the cleaning process.

The second model in your order is printing right now!

If everything goes alright, your order will be shipped on the estimated shipping date which we provided during the ordering process:

ETS: 2012-10-17

The email indeed informs you that the models have been checked and moved forward to the printing queue.

Kind regards,
Mitchell
