As if I didn't have enough collectibles on my desk already, I used Shapeways to make some accessories for them, such as this shipment that I just received.

First up is a little guy I call the "Kondorean Sidekick" based on an old Transformer:

Then there's a model based on a Transformers fan Website mascot:

(That's Botch the Crab from the Box Art Archives.)

There's also a "Tremble" mini-minifig in this next shot that I put together:

Look at those little robots, making friends.

Obviously, I did not make the Soundwave minifig...

One of my customers ordered a bunch of building toy mini-figure upgrade parts from my store, painted them, and then posted the pictures on a forum.

It was like watching my kid grow up and go to prom.

Actually, I have no idea what that's like, but it seemed like a reasonable metaphor at the moment.

Anyway, here's his post (my parts were covers for the robot's torsos...and one of the helmets).

Another customer posted some pictures of upgrade parts I rendered for him. I made parts in the first two pictures, and the last five or so.

I ordered a second design for one of the micro-statues in FCS. It's very loosely based on the Transformer toy "Rewind."

And the "Tremble" design in red and black:

Here they are standing beside Transformers kreons for scale (those Transformers toys are the same size of lego mini-figs, so my guys are about 2.25 cm tall):
