About me: Paul King, aka stop4stuff

Expertise: 3D modelling for 3D printing. I can create just about anything, although organic modelling is not a strong point.

Experience: Modelling for 3D printing since June 2010. 3D modelling with Imagine for about 20 years.

Portfolio: My Shapeways Shop

Rate: Varies depening upon the complexity of the job.

Contact: Via Shapeways PM, or email paul@stop4stuff.com

A few of examples of my work.

Twin rail mobius pendant

OO scale K8 telephone box

A selection of model train parts recently modelled for 'O' Scale (1:43.5) for printing in Shapeways Frosted Ultra Detail.

To put the size into perspective, the large spring unit at the bottom of the image is just 35mm long by 11mm high - small and accurate is my kinda thing;)

Very happy with the results!

Paul made me a 3d cross ring for my girlfriend and she was impressed! It looked just like the one I accidentally broke.

He also made me a copy of an antique porcelain canopy.

Definitively recommended!

Hello. My name is Jeremy Williams, and I'm looking for a 3d modeler for a video game my team is working on. The only option for payment is an even share of sales. Contact me at avm0121@hotmail.com if you're interested.

Hi Jeremy,

Thanks for the interest, however I specialise in creating 3D models for 3D printing.

I hope you find someone to fill your vacancy.

Cheers, Paul Subject: Re: stop4stuff - 3d Modeller for hire Posted by martijnr on Thu, 15 Mar 2012 13:50:53 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Paul helped me with creating a piece of office supplies and did excellent work. He thought along and came with solutions for problems. The model was needed on a short notice and he delivered the model on time and replied quick to my e-mails. Recommended!

Hi Martijn,

Thanks for your feedback.

Cheers, Paul

Paul helped me find my problem with an order I uploaded and got me going again. This guy definitely knows his modeling and he knows Shapeways.

I need a model for a thread adapter, to have a machinist make me a model will cost an arm and a leg, but i think making a CAD 3d model to be printed should be an hour or less job, but I am better with hardware than software. If your interested, let me know, I'd like it done within the week, so i can play with it next weekend. the female threads would be 1/2"x28threads, the male end would be 13/16″-16 with a ~2" 'washer' between the two... heres a link to a picture, but i'd like a large washer built in...

I've a few life issues to deal with the last couple of months, but am back on track and now available for your 3D modelling (for 3D printing) jobs no matter how small or large.

Cheers, Paul

I am extremely happy with Paul. He helped me with a model I had been working on.

I had been struggling to get my model to get past the automated upload process...until finally Paul came by and helped me!

He said it wasn't a problem helping me and gave me a tutorial on how to fix it if I had any future problems.

I would highly recommend this guy!
