i was finally able to order a print of my replica ring revolver, based on an antique from the victorian era. it's exactly what it sound like - a ring, with a functional revolver built in. the original fired 5mm bullets. mine.. .well, it's plastic. it doesn't do much besides look pretty.

but it does that quite well.

That is crazy awesome! I don't think any of those cool details will come through in stainless though. A silver version would be killer in more than one way. Have some of the detail and be expensive. Is it hollow?

the "revovler" part is mostly hollow due to the "bullet" chambers, but otherwise no. i could of course modify it to be so. silver would indeed be beautiful, but i can't afford the printing cost right now.
